SAFEGUARDING YOUR COMMUNITY

In a Matter of Seconds...

Will you fail them in the next campus emergency?
Alert systems that take minutes or hours often result in tragedy.

- ❖ Is your mass-alert system based on limited one-to-one technology like cell phones or texting?
- ❖ When there is a large-scale emergency, can your entire system clog up and collapse?
- ❖ Are you on an open, unprotected system like texting that hackers could potentially access?
- ❖ Even under nonemergency conditions, does your present system test out to reach tens of thousands in minutes or hours – rather than seconds?
- ❖ Is your program fail safe in providing redundant alert methods?
- ❖ Does your present system enable you to direct students, faculty and staff silently out of harm's way?
- ❖ Are you bogged down with a complex database that contains students' personal information?
- ❖ Can your present system deliver critical and time-sensitive follow-up instructions that end users receive in less than 30 seconds?
